Key Summary

Uredale's economy is defined by an educated workforce against a job market governed by primary industries. Roughly 54% of Uredale's population is of working age (20–65), with 60% (aged 16+) currently economically active and 52% (aged 16+) holding a Level 3 qualification or above, but its labour market is disproportionately clustered around essential service, care, and hospitality roles - even when compared to regional averages.

While most local industry sectors sit within a narrow 3% variance of national baselines, Agriculture, Forestry, and Fishing play a disproportionately large role locally, accounting for 4.4% of industry compared to the 0.9% national average as-of 2021. Regionally speaking, chefs, cleaners and domestics, care workers, and home carers are all between 2.0%-5.0% higher than Yorkshire averages, with common top occupations like Solicitors, Programmers, and Nursing not entering top job posting lists at all.
